Good afternoon,

Today is the financial disclosure deadline for local campaigns—and your donation today can make a real difference.

Running for office isn't cheap. Even the most dedicated grassroots candidates need resources to reach voters. Campaign literature, postcards, yard signs, digital advertising, voter outreach, event materials, and volunteer supplies all come with a price tag. Every dollar helps candidates communicate their message and connect with more voters.

Today's financial disclosure filing is also an important public milestone. The amount a campaign has raised is one of the ways supporters, opponents, and the media gauge a campaign's strength and momentum. A strong report can demonstrate broad community support and help a campaign build credibility heading into the busiest months of the election.

If you're considering making a political contribution, donating directly to a candidate's campaign often has the greatest immediate impact. Direct contributions go straight to the campaign, allowing candidates to decide where the funds are most needed—whether that's printing literature, ordering yard signs, purchasing postage, or expanding voter outreach. While party organizations play an important role in supporting candidates and building infrastructure, direct donations give campaigns additional flexibility to meet their own priorities.

If there's a local candidate you believe in, please consider making a contribution today —before the reporting deadline. Your support can help ensure they have the resources they need to compete effectively and reach the voters who will decide this election.

Every contribution, no matter the size, helps. Click HERE for some options on campaigns we are getting behind.

Thank you for investing in our local democracy.
